YOUR CHILD'S MASTER PROTOCOL

For the moments when Aria needs you most. Two steps. Two minutes.

You did not open this page by accident. What Aria is moving through has a name, a cosmic reason, and an end date. The current sub-cycle completes in November 2026.

STEP 1 - GROUND YOURSELF (30 seconds)

Turn to face: South-West

Place your right hand on your heart - gently, with intention.

Three slow breaths. In through the nose, out through the mouth.

STEP 2 - SPEAK THIS FOR YOUR CHILD

Force of drive and courage - I call upon you now. I come to you as the parent of Aria. I see the energy and friction of this season and I choose to move through it with Aria. I release my fear that this intensity is damage. I know the end date. I know the purpose. I know the guardian. I am here. I am paying attention. I am enough. The season does not exhaust Aria. It is forging Aria.

WHAT ARIA'S SEASON CONTAINS

You are not at the mercy of what is happening. You are about to understand exactly what is happening - and precisely what to do about it.

As of November 10, 2026, these are the live forces active in Aria's life:

PHASE 1 - LIFE SEASON - MARS ends December 2028

The current season is giving Aria exceptional energy and drive - but without a clear direction yet, that energy can feel like friction. The season is not the problem. The direction is what needs finding.

PHASE 2 - SUB-CYCLE - SOUTH NODE ends November 2026

The sub-cycle is the immediate arena within the life season. The current season is asking Aria to release - patterns and ways of being that no longer fit. What looks like withdrawal is often Aria's system completing something that was ready to complete. Every protocol in this Navigator is calibrated to this exact chapter.

PHASE 3 - THIS NAVIGATOR - November 10, 2026 90 days

You are here. The Star Calendar, Activity Guide, and every date in this report are calculated from this exact point in Aria's chart. The calendar tells you the state of each day. The Activity Guide tells you when to act. The Domain Insights tell you what to watch and what to do. Use this Navigator as your operational guide until the next 90-day window.

YOUR PARENT DAILY COMPASS

Three states. One page. Everything you need for any day in Aria's calendar.

Check today's date in the calendar. Find the state. Return here. One row tells you what to do, what to avoid, how to engage the body, and how to meet the emotional world. That is the entire practice for that day.

STATE	WHAT THIS MEANS	WHAT TO DO TODAY	WHAT TO AVOID
GREEN	A strong day. Aria is at their most open, receptive and accessible. Best day to act.	Schedule dentist or doctor. Start a new sport or activity. Have the important talk. Introduce a new routine. Let Aria lead something new.	Routine-only tasks. Do not spend a Green day on maintenance. It will not come back.
AMBER	A normal day. Solid and steady. Good for consistent effort and daily routines.	Homework, practice, showing up. Regular movement. Side-by-side connection. Normal parenting, well-executed.	Expecting breakthroughs. Pushing new challenges. Save those for Green days.
RED	A sensitive day. Aria's regulation is lower. Body and emotions are under more pressure than usual.	Soothe before you teach. Extra physical affection. Earlier bedtime. Familiar food. Quiet connection. Reduce all demands.	New challenges. Discipline conversations. Dentist or doctor if you can move it. Crowds. Extra screen time.

PHYSICAL HEALTH & BODY

Aria | South Node | 90-day window

What to watch. What to do. Calibrated to where Aria is right now.

Physical Health & Body Aria's Luminary Navigator - 90-Day Operational Guide --- The current sub-cycle is doing something specific to Aria's physical body that most parents mistake for mood: it is quietly reducing Aria's physical resilience at the cellular level of daily recovery. The body that bounced back from a hard day by morning is now taking longer to reset, and the gap between effort and recovery is widening in ways that show up as chronic low-grade fatigue, a digestive system that is more reactive than usual, and a physical stamina that dips without warning. This matters for Aria's chart in a particular way because the health domain sits in Virgo, governed by Mercury, and Mercury is currently concentrated in the community and aspirations zone of the chart - meaning Aria's nervous system is spending enormous background energy on social processing that never fully surfaces as visible behavior. That hidden expenditure drains the body's reserves without an obvious cause. The opposition in Aria's primary aspects creates a pulling tension between how Aria's physical vitality wants to express itself and where the chart's current energy is actually flowing, which means the body signals Aria sends - complaints of tiredness, stomach discomfort, headaches that arrive on busy days - are genuine physiological events, not performance or avoidance. ---

WHAT TO WATCH FOR

What you will see specifically in the next 90 days is a pattern of physical complaints that cluster around transition points rather than spreading evenly through the week. Watch for Aria mentioning stomach or digestive discomfort on Monday mornings and Thursday afternoons - these are the stress-accumulation peaks for a Virgo-ruled sixth house when Mercury is under sub-cycle pressure. Watch also for a noticeable drop in appetite during weeks that carry higher social or academic demand, followed by a compensatory hunger two or three days later. A third signal is sleep that looks normal in duration but produces a child who wakes already tired - this is the nervous system failing to fully restore overnight. Finally, watch for an unusual sensitivity to noise or light on days following any physically demanding activity, which signals that Aria's recovery threshold has been crossed. ---

WHAT TO DO

When Aria complains of a stomachache on a school morning and there is no fever and no obvious illness, do not default immediately to 'you're fine, let's go' or to keeping Aria home - instead, do this first: sit beside Aria for three minutes and ask one concrete question about what the body is feeling, not what is worrying Aria. That brief acknowledgment interrupts the nervous-system loop that is generating the physical symptom. Then make the decision. Early in this 90-day window, audit Aria's physical schedule for hidden overload - look specifically at how many consecutive high-stimulation days appear in a row, because Aria's body needs a genuine low-demand day embedded in every

EMOTIONAL WORLD & NERVOUS SYSTEM

Aria | South Node | 90-day window

What to watch. What to do. Calibrated to where Aria is right now.

Something quiet and significant is reorganizing Aria's emotional interior right now, and if you have been noticing that your child seems harder to reach than usual - present in the room but somehow further away - you are not imagining it. The South Node contraction period is pulling Aria's emotional world inward with unusual force, and because the Moon governs Aria's home-and-roots house from a position of exceptional strength, this inward pull is not fragile or anxious in character - it is deep and slow and very hard to interrupt from the outside. What makes this specific to Aria's chart is the tension between that strong, steady, inwardly-anchored Moon and the intensity of Mars sitting in the transformation house ruling Aria's core sense of self. These two energies are in direct opposition in Aria's chart, which means that when the emotional world contracts, it does not contract quietly - it contracts against resistance. The third piece is the Sun moving through the inner-world house, reinforcing the retreat. What you are seeing is not withdrawal from you. It is Aria being reorganized from the inside, and the process is as real as a growth plate expanding.

WHAT TO WATCH FOR

The first signal is a specific flatness that appears without warning - Aria is mid-conversation or mid-activity and simply goes quiet, not upset, just absent, as if something internal closed a door. The second is an unusual sensitivity to the home environment itself: complaints about noise, light, the temperature of a room, or the smell of dinner that feel disproportionate but are actually Aria's nervous system communicating overwhelm through the nearest available channel. The third is a new reluctance around bedtime that is not stalling - it is Aria genuinely struggling to let the day go, holding onto wakefulness with a kind of low-grade urgency. Watch also for Aria seeking your physical proximity without asking for it directly, gravitating toward whatever room you are in and then not saying much.

WHAT TO DO

When Aria goes flat mid-interaction, your first move is not to re-engage with the original activity but to lower your own energy visibly - slow your speech, soften your posture, and offer something sensory and familiar rather than a question. A warm drink, a blanket, the specific chair Aria already loves. Questions accelerate the nervous system; familiar objects settle it. When the environmental complaints arrive - the room is too loud, dinner smells wrong - take them seriously as emotional data rather than testing your patience, and respond to the feeling underneath rather than the specific complaint: "Something feels like too much right now" is more useful than adjusting the thermostat. Early in this 90-day window, your priority is establishing a consistent landing ritual for the end of each day - the same sequence, the same low sensory environment, predictable enough that Aria's nervous system can begin to trust the transition into rest.

THE NEXT 90 DAYS FOR ARIA

What opens. What resists. What your role is in both.

DOORS OPENING FOR YOUR CHILD

Something quiet is becoming available to Aria right now - not a burst of outward energy, but a deepening. This child is moving toward a more interior version of thinking, and what that will look like from your side is Aria becoming more selective, more deliberate, occasionally more still than you expect. Where Aria once reached toward every social opportunity with easy enthusiasm, you will begin to notice a new pickiness - a pause before saying yes, a preference for one trusted person over a group, a willingness to stay home without complaint. This is not retreat. This is Aria beginning to know what actually matters, and the door opening here is the door to genuine self-knowledge. What you are protecting in this window is that emerging discernment - the quiet inside Aria that is learning to sort signal from noise. Protect it by not rushing Aria back toward busyness the moment stillness appears.

FRICTION ARRIVING

The resistance that arrives in this window will look like effort becoming harder for no visible reason. Things Aria did easily before - joining in, bouncing back, moving between tasks - will require more internal negotiation, and you will see it as flatness, low motivation, or an occasional intensity that feels disproportionate to whatever just happened. This is not regression. This is not a problem with Aria's friendships, schoolwork, or your parenting. It is the season asking Aria to reorganize at a deeper level than is visible, and the friction is simply the sound of that interior work. The teaching inside this friction is that Aria is learning to identify what comes from within rather than what is borrowed from the room.
